Fiscal Court amends nepotism ordinance

BY BRAD BOWMAN
news@hclocal.com

The Henry County Fiscal Court last week passed an amendment to the nepotism ordinance on second reading during a special meeting.

When Henry County Sheriff Danny Cravens made it known that his son would go through the process for a full-time position as a sheriff's deputy, the issue of nepotism came up in the county's personnel policy and the ethics ordinance.

Cravens maintained that any potential candidate goes through an interview board panel made up of employees at the sheriff's office so that he is removed from the process.

"I spoke with every employee about if they saw a problem with Matthew (Craven's son) being hired," Cravens said. "I take politics and myself out of the process because that doesn't work well. I offered the job to other people and no one wanted it. If the interview board presents the candidate and I don't have anything to do with the process I don't consider it nepotism."

Magistrate Scott Bates clarified his position during the meeting.

"Let me just say this. I don't want to make it like it is a personal thing here against Danny. I've talked to him several times about this," he said. "I would hope we are not doing this to just say... trying to push this through before he can hire his son, which he already told his son he was hiring him. I don't think we need to hire kinfolk. I've felt that way from the get-go and I still feel that way full-time."

Bates admitted that Cravens is an elected officer and Craven's interpretation of a KRS regarding stipulations for hiring family members is verified through the statute. But the ethics ordinance may trump that.

"We have two different statutes that are in conflict with each other," Henry County Attorney Virginia Harrod said. "The ethics ordinance may trump the revised KRS and the request for an opinion from the attorney general could take a while. A

West, who has a background in fashion merchandising, thought about opening a store of her own that would serve Henry, Oldham and Shelby counties.

Tax bills fuel public ire

Eminence residents voiced their concerns over the EIS tax increase at last week's board meeting after receiving the district's separate billing the day before.

Buddy Berry, superintendent of the Eminence Independent School District, said the school board voted a tax increase in August and advertised the mandatory notices with a public hearing. The increase will cost an Eminence property owners an additional $72 per $100,000 of assessed value.

Cemetery fence removal causes tension

BY BRAD BOWMAN
news@hclocal.com

The recent removal of a wrought iron fence from around Point Pleasant Cemetery has been a contentious issue for some families who have loved ones buried there.

In the last two weeks, Stanley Clark, sexton, started taking down the more than 100-year-old fence surrounding the cemetery.

Patty Ethington's father is buried there. Ethington was passionate about keeping the the fence, a part of the cemetery's identity, like Judy Lyons, Jane Maskalick and Carolyn Aldridge, who have opposed the fence's removal.

Ethington, Leonard and Robbie Yount went to the Pleasureville Scrap Yard — where Clark had taken some of the pieces — to buy back the fence.

"I was at the cemetery on Nov. 4, and by Nov. 6, they had taken it down," Ethington said. "We fought for eight years to preserve it and keep it there. In 2005, I was named chairperson of the special fence maintenance committee. It had been hit several times by cars over the years. We raised $3,000 through fundraising and from random people that donated money in the mail from people that had family buried there. I don't know why they didn't call me. I would've called everyone else."

The Point Pleasant Cemetery Board decided in April that something had to be done about the fence. Board members, Diana Berry, secretary-treasurer,

Look everyday for thankfulness

Tuesday was the 150th anniversary of President Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

During the first few days of July 1863, Union and Confederate soldiers converged on Gettysburg, Pa., and fought a horrific, bloody battle that saw more than 50,000 deaths in just three days. That is almost as many deaths as in the entire Vietnam War. The Battle of Gettysburg was the turning point of the Civil War. This war tore the nation and its families apart.

While Lincoln contemplated what he might say at the upcoming dedication of a memorial in Gettysburg, a woman by the name of

Guest Columnist

Sarah Josepha Hale, a magazine editor, wrote to the president urging him to have the "day of our annual Thanksgiving made a national and fixed Union festival." Up to this point, the country celebrated Thanksgiving, but there was no established date. There was confusion with the holiday being celebrated at different times throughout the nation.

Traditionally, the first Thanksgiving took place in 1621 with the Pilgrims and American Indians coming together to give thanks to God Almighty for the bountiful harvest. Thanksgiving was made a national holiday with a proclamation from the Continental Congress in 1777.

Until 1863, the country celebrated Thanksgiving, but there was no established date. There was confusion with the holiday being celebrated at different times throughout the nation. "Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war," Lincoln later wrote in his Gettysburg address.

And yet in the midst of the tragedies of that great civil war, the president would take time to write, "The year that is drawing towards its close, has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties, which are so constantly enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they come, others have been added, which are of so extraordinary a nature that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften even the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever watchful providence of Almighty God."

Lincoln wrote his Thanksgiving proclamation on Oct. 3, 1863, while contemplating what he might say of the horrors of that bloody battle in Gettysburg. The president wrote of giving thanks for a year filled with blessings and bounties, of fruitful fields, and healthful skies, while war was waged around him.

Lincoln showed that in the midst of what we may see as a terrible time in our life, death of a loved one, disease, divorce, loss of a job, whatever we may be facing, there are blessings that we can still thank God for.

Sometimes we need to be told something over and over, and over again before we can believe it and know it. That may be why David repeatedly wrote "O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good: for His mercy endureth for ever" seven times in the book of Psalms.

While we gather together tomorrow for Thanksgiving, we should look for things to be thankful for every day. Give thanks with a grateful heart, because of what the Lord has done for us.

Our county budget: A difference between the state and the feds

Today's article will be the last in the series of county updates. Hopefully you have learned a few things about county government that you might not have known.

For this final article, I want to talk about the county budget. As far as I am concerned, putting the budget together and then monitoring it is the most important responsibility that my office and the magistrates have. There are more than 210 line items in this year's $5.9-million budget.

I take pride in having a feel for what we have spent and where we should be on any given day of the year. Our approach to the budget is much different than that of the state and feds.

You will never hear a Fiscal Court member say, "It's getting close to the end of year, we had better spend the money or

John Logan brent
Henry County Judge-Executive

we won't get it back next year." I hear this all the time from various government agencies.

With this approach to managing money it's no wonder why our country is in debt. Just because it's in the budget doesn't mean we have to spend it. A good example of this is our $50,000 renewals and repairs line item. We made it through last year with only $26,000 spent from this account. This year in a two-week time period we had three air conditioners and two water heaters go out. If that trend kept up for long we were going to need what we put back last year. Sounds simple, I know.

There are a dozen major county services and several miscellaneous items covered under the $5.9-million overall budget.

Of all of these services, there are four that make up 58 percent of the total budget.

The road budget, which must be kept separate from the general fund, is $1.2 million. The sheriff's payroll — which is reimbursed by the sheriff — and the accompanying benefits — which Fiscal Court pays — together add up $724,000. The jail budget for this year is $629,500. The budget to operate the EMS/Paramedics services is

It is interesting to watch trends develop as you analyze the budget from year to year.

From 1990 to 2003, the jail budget was up a staggering 400 percent. Thankfully, over the last 10 years it has been flat. Property and workers' compensation insurance rose drastically in the early 2000s, but that has been flat the last six years. On the downside, our health insurance cost has doubled over the last decade. The trend in lower interest rates is evident in the county budget.

In the 2006/2007, budget we anticipated $71,000 in interest from the bank on our money. This year we budgeted $22,250.

As most of you know, the county funds the 911 emergency call center at the state police post primarily with a $1 per month surcharge that is on the landline phone bill. Nationwide, residential landlines have been reduced by one-third in the last three years. Our receipts show Henry Countians have dropped their landlines by one-fifth over the last three years. This is one of those times where I am glad we are behind.

Overall, I would rate the county's finances as sound, but fragile. Maintaining a healthy reserve is the basis for our soundness. The fact that we have so many mandatory expenses makes for an inherently delicate budget. Holding what expenses we have control over down, and looking for creative ways to generate income without raising taxes, must be the game plan.

Expanding our EMS non-emergency transports is a good example of income generation without taxation. The county is up $50,000 in EMS revenues over the first quarter of last year because of this push. I am proud of the fact that we provide the services we do with only one major tax, that coming from property. Every surrounding county has either an occupational tax or an insurance premium tax.

Even Trimble County, with a landfill that contributes $700,000 - 800,000 to their bottom line, put in an insurance premium tax this past year.

Every April, Fiscal Court meets to approve a new budget. The public is welcome to attend and learn about the budget as we go over each line item. If you have questions about the budget or specific areas of county government please call our office at 845-5707.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A moral responsibility

The historic wrought iron fence, surrounding the Point Pleasant Cemetery that is located in a curve on KY 573, was silently removed last week. Its purpose had been to prevent speeding cars and weather related accidents from demolishing the tombstones. There seems to be no one in the community who witnessed it being taken down.

The "owners," family members of the deceased, of the cemetery and the community should have been notified by the board of the intent to remove the fence. They should have been informed of the actual date of the intended removal so opposition could have been voiced. All it would have taken was a notice in the Local.

That was not done.

I do realize it is hard to get people to serve on the cemetery board. I know it is a responsibility and a thankless position.

The last annual meeting of the cemetery board was scheduled March 11, 2013, as noted in the Henry County Local. Jane Maskalick and I went to this meeting — our great grandfather, a Civil War veteran is buried there. The three others present were the cemetery board members, Diana Young Berry, Carlos Pugh and Stanley Clark.

At the meeting it was noted that the cemetery was short of funds and there was a need to cash a CD. However, the main topic was the wrought iron fence that surrounded and protected the cemetery. It was immediately evident that the three board members had already decided to take it down because it was "too hard to maintain." Jane and I both voiced very strong opposition to this but the decision had already been made to have it removed.

It was stated that the fence would be taken down as soon as the state issued a permit and installed the guardrail. They were sure the permit could be obtained. Was it obtained? If so, where is the guardrail?

What I did not know was that there was a fence committee chaired by Patti Ethington. She informed me this week she had been unable to attend the annual meeting and had asked that it be delayed. The board would not delay it. She told me the fence issue had been voted down every year since 2005. If there was a fence committee how could the board, in good faith, decide on its own to do this? Especially when the fence committee chair could not attend?

I understand part of the fence was sold for scrap to the Pleasureville Scrap Yard. Patti Ethington paid $148.00 to buy those portions back hoping to get the remaining sections. Those scrapped sections are now in the possession of Leonard Yount who hopes to put the fence back. I was told that Stanley Clark, the cemetery Sexton, has the sections that were in good repair.

Stanley Clark returned on Tuesday of this week to the cemetery to get the remaining posts. He was confronted there by John Yount who asked him to leave the posts. He refused. John asked him to sell the fence back to himself and members of the community. Mr. Clark refused saying, it's gone. Asked again, he restated, "it's gone!" He took the posts and left.

Additional questions are: Was this a conflict of interest? Stanley Clark was on the board that decided to have the fence removed without the fence committee chair present, he removed it and now says it is gone. Has he sold it? Did he have a buyer? Why would he not sell it back to the community? Something is not right. Stanley Clark and the board have a moral responsibility and maybe a legal responsibility to return the fence.

Judy Lyons

You did the first musical at Henry County High School, tell me about the productions.

We started with Li'l Abner and did 12 Broadway plays at HCHS. A teacher who was the assistant football coach, Gary Jones, was interested in doing a musical. He said if we could team up and he would do the drama and I would do the music. Of course, no one thought that combination would ever work — a music teacher and an assistant football coach. We did about 12 plays.

We had an awful lot of really talented people that helped us too. There were people around the county that painted the sets and didn't charge us anything for them. I mean, we had some really painted sets. Some the prettiest ones I remember were Oklahoma and Hello Dolly.

Buck Roberts was the custodian out there and I wouldn't have been able to do what I did without him. He was my sideman. He was a tremendous help. He was there for everything I did with every concert and production as long as I taught.

The acoustics were terrible in the gymnasium. We had makeshift lighting. They took down some of the old lights that lit the stage (in the gymnasium) and put them on poles. We didn't have dimmers. That was about it. There wasn't any technical lighting at all like what they have now.

I thought that if we could get some of football players in our plays we would have it made and we did.

One of the best feelings I get when I go (to the high school productions) is that this tradition is being carried on. The board of education and superintendent have not said — you know the arts have always been treated like stepchildren and if anything is ever going to be cut from a program why it usually starts with the arts — and I don't believe that's happening here.

Students gain a lot of friendships (from participating in the productions) and they can gain poise through being out in front of the public. I have had kids say they were so timid that they couldn't get in front of a class until I had to go onstage. Now they can be public speakers. I think it helps with that. Kids with responsible jobs can get up in front of the public. We strove for anyone that wanted to be in the production of the play could be — they might not have the lead — but everyone had a job. Sometimes we had over 100 people working in a production.

Coming to Henry County was the best decision I ever made. It gave me the opportunity to do things we didn't have here. We didn't have an audition choir like the Alpha Choir or any musical productions.

What was your role as a music teacher then?

I had several choral classes. We formed the Alpha Choir which was an audition choir made up of about 50 students. I enjoyed that thoroughly. We did a Christmas Concert. We would start around Thanksgiving and do performances at about three different churches with a spring concert. I did The Messiah for years and I don't even think that would be allowed now.

What led to your interest and career in music?

I've loved music ever since I can remember. Some of my family were musical and I was always around music. We had a lot of music in the home. I played the Glockenspiel in the high school band and rotated between that and other percussion instruments in college. I started taking piano lessons in the second grade. It was so strange. They would let me out of my elementary classes so I could take my piano lessons. My teacher was Ms. Garvey.

I played at horse shows in Oldham County and 15 years at the Shelby County horseshow — that is how I met my wife. I played strictly organ and you get the rhythm going with the gait of the horse during the showing.

My wife Mary and I both have played music in the New Castle United Methodist Church for more than 30 years.

I always had encouragement for music. Music has been my life and provided a busy life. Until I retired, I had very little leisure time.

Do you have any favorite composers or musical pieces?

I really like Gershwin and Handel. I like Bach and Beethoven. I like them all when it really comes down to it. I kind of favor more on the Romanticism Era. It's a little more melodious I think. You can follow the melody line a little closer in it.

I like some popular music — music that was popular at one time not the popular music today. I do like Kenny G. I do like Broadway music.

Do you have a funny story during your time teaching and putting on productions?

This one goes back to a student: a parent one time told me that she (her daughter) is a very talented girl, but she doesn't want to do that in public. Her mother told me, 'Now she's got a lot of talent and she's really a good singer, but she's not going to do it in public.' I thought it was so funny that she said that. I had to respond, 'Well, we are not going to come and make house calls for her to perform.' She ended up performing beautifully.

I think if you are teacher and if you don't have fun with your kids you have lost something along the way.

and mortar store were a little overwhelming to me. Then I came across this concept and thought this could be the solution."

West said she researched the idea of a fashion truck for over a year, finding examples in Los Angeles, Nashville and Cincinnati. Being able to move her merchandise throughout the region was appealing to her and would free her up from a single location where she would have to draw potential customers. With help from her family, including her mom, husband and uncles Rod Raisor and Mike Brown, West designed her mobile boutique. West first rolled out her fashion truck at Light Up

The bright pink mobile boutique driven by West, above, may be rolling into your neighborhood soon.

Shelbyville, where visitors were enthusiastic to say the least.

"Hangers were flying," West said. "Now, my biggest problem is keeping the truck stocked because I sell out everywhere I go."

West orders her inventory from the fashion district in Los Angeles and typically has a one-week turnaround on orders. She chooses her boutique items based on research and trends and strives to offer items that appeal to a wide range of customers. Buying has become easier now that she gets feedback from customers and tracks popular items by sell-outs and orders.

"I didn't really know what to expect and it's moving faster than I expected," West said. "But it's great — that's a great problem to have. People have been scooping up the products so fast. And everybody is loving it."

West plans to travel to festivals and set up in different locations throughout the region. She is also having a great deal of success with private parties.

"I'll come out to their home or business and open up the boutique for a private shopping session," West said. "Just get 15 or 20 of your girlfriends together in your subdivision or at work and I'll give the hostess 10% of the total sales in product."

West will also ship orders. Customers can get a look at her latest arrivals by checking her Facebook page where she'll post pictures of the merchandise with the available sizes and costs. This is also where she'll post her public events by keeping a calendar of appearances

West isn't sure where her fashion truck will take her, but she said she's loving the ride so far.

"I love the fact that I can help people look fashionable at an affordable price," West said. "I want my customers to walk out feeling great."

is — and it happens traditionally throughout the state just not in Henry County — that there were two billings this year,” Berry said. “There was the initial billing that occurred on Oct. 1 and that had all of your typical taxes minus your Eminence school tax. Because we had done the special facilities tax there was a 45-day window that it takes to pass it. It was still in that process during the Oct. 1 deadline and so they mailed out the tax bills without our tax in it.”

The increase hit a few bumps in the road, however.

The approved tax increase missed the Sept. 15 deadline for the district to report their tax rate to Henry County Clerk Juanita Lashley. The deadline, coupled with a recall petition filed on Sept. 27, delayed Eminence residents’ tax bills even further. Lashley rejected the recall petition.

On Oct. 29, attorney, Perry Arnold, told the Henry County Local that his client, Eminence resident Justin Atchison, had filed a lawsuit against the school district for not complying with the statute in regards to the public notice and hearing. Henry County Circuit Judge Karen Conrad rejected Atchison’s request for a restraining order on the tax rates, but advised the district not to send out the tax bills until she made the ruling. Lashley confirmed on Nov. 4, that Eminence Superintendent Buddy Berry contacted her office Thursday, Oct. 31, shortly after the hearing in La Grange, and requested the tax bills be sent out.

The separate billing and how it has been printed may have led to the confusion, according to Berry.

“Typically that says real estate (the printing on the bill). It never says school on it. It never mentions the school. This year because we were a second mailer, I can’t speak to what they were thinking, now it says Eminence School’s real estate tax. So, folks think that is a new one because when they look at their old bill it wasn’t on there,” Berry said. “There was a recall time frame that has now ceased, that has passed so now the taxes are what they are.”

Berry explained that the district’s revenue stream is dependent on the school tax bill and if a judge (Henry County Circuit Judge Karen Conrad) finds the advertisements the school made to be insufficient the tax rate would still be the compensating rate for last year with a reimbursement from the new rate.

Numerous people sat in the bleachers during the discussion, but only three voiced their concerns.

Eminence storeowner Gerald Bohannon was one of those three. Bohannon felt that the board snuck in the raise. Berry reiterated the district advertised the required amount of notices in the newspaper and the board hosted a public hearing before raising the tax increase on Aug. 14.

“Ten percent is a lot of money man. It’s going to hurt a lot of families around here that just don’t have that. I mean that it is all there is to it,” Bohannon said. “Don’t get me wrong. This is our school and I want the best for our school... to me it seemed like it was just kind of snuck through. I should’ve been paying a bit more attention to the county affairs.”

Eminence City Council member Polly Troxell raised questions of the separate billing timing and spoke of those in the county that are economically challenged and senior citizens living on fixed incomes.

“Buddy, I would just like to know, and I’m sure everybody else would, if you have a pending case on this raise why did you not wait till next week when judge ruled on it before you send the tax bills out,” Troxell asked. “Are you all aware of how low-income this county is and how it hurts the impoverished? I deal with it everyday. I got 22 calls alone from seniors last night about the tax. ‘What am I going to do? How am I going to pay it?’ I have no answers because Tri-County Community Action Agency has no money for taxing, but those are voting people. So, how in the world do you expect them to keep on — just keep on taxing them to death?”

“Did they also call about your city tax,” Berry asked.

Buddy reiterated that the Henry County Local ran four headline stories on the tax increase accompanied by several ads to address Bohannon’s concerns and the judge’s ruling could be six months from now while the school depended on the taxation raise.

Treva Browning, Eminence City Councilwoman, defended the Eminence City tax increase, which she said was to keep current with the cost of living and the school tax rate is just too high.

“I don’t have a problem with the four percent but the seven or 10 whatever, I have proof right here in my hand... my county and city together the school’s taxes equal to that,” Browning said. “I can take a four percent (increase) just fine. My grandkids go to school here. I want the school to do well, but this is ridiculous. It is too much. This is too big of a raise. We did raise the city tax ... to meet the cost of living, but this is outrageous.”

According to Berry, the Eminence tax rate is around the 60th percentile in the state’s school districts.

“In the independent districts (independent school districts) we are a little less than the 60th percentile,” Berry said. “Eminence is closer to the 45th percentile.”

Berry reemphasized that every district had taken the nickel tax increase, the special facilities tax, except for Trimble and Carroll Counties, where more industry is located.

FENCE

Stanley Clark, sexton and Carlos Pugh, chairman all agreed if support didn’t come the fence would fall.

“There were three sections of the fence that were gone — that were run down by a man in 2007,” Berry said. “The man had insurance but not enough to cover the sections. Those three sections were in the curve and have been gone since 2007.”

The board pays for maintenance through perpetual care, but only through the interest generated from it.

“We have perpetual care, and there is $31,000 in it, but only the interest can be used. The interest rate was so low last year that it wasn’t enough to cover the maintenance and mowing,” Berry said. “We had to cash in a CD we had that wasn’t designated for perpetual care. We got about $2,000.”

Pugh said he doesn’t blame people for being upset about the fence, but that they don’t show up for the board meetings to be informed and supporting the cemetery through donations where their family members are buried.

“Whenever your liability outweighs your asset you have to do something,” Pugh said. “The fence was a liability. We have asked for donations and asked for donations. We couldn’t afford to maintain the fence. I made an oral statement at our last meeting six months ago that if somebody didn’t help and step forward to help us with the fence something would have to be done about it.”

According to the board meeting minutes for April 8, Pugh moved that the fence be taken down after six months if no one came up with a solution to repair or replace the fence. Stanley Clark, sexton, seconded the motion. Clark said mowing around the fence created time consuming problems and roundup created just a brown circle in the grass.

“The fence was in bad shape. It couldn’t be repaired. It was bent in several places. It was rusted at the bottom and other places. It was leaning. It just looked awful. There were places that were poked in there that — had been welded on it to try and hold it up,” Stanley said. “I took the pieces to the auction barn to see if it was worth anything in Eminence. A guy offered $750 dollars for it and wanted to know if I would take it and I said sure. I took the other (pieces) over to the scrap yard and it brought $120. There was no way to match the fences with pieces that were missing. Every cemetery around has taken their fence down because of the maintenance. We were going to put that money back in for a plank fence.”

Lyons and her sister, Maskalick, attended the meeting. In the meeting minutes, Berry reported that Lyons opposed the fence being taken down and suggested that Point Pleasant Church take the cemetery over. Berry reported that the church didn’t want the liability or responsibility of the cemetery.

“It’s been in the church newsletter and there wasn’t any interest,” Berry said. “(Lyons and Maskalick) were there they knew it was going to be down in six months and didn’t tell anybody I guess until now.”

Ethington and many others just want the fence back.

“The fence was part of the cemetery. We want it back,” Ethington said. “We want to try and preserve our past and it was just torn down.”

Pugh said the last vehicle that ran through the fence knocked down six headstones and the board attempted to have a guardrail put in place.

“I contacted the highway commissioner requesting a guardrail. They said the county traffic wasn’t high enough,” Pugh said. “Instead they put up a sign. This fence was a liability just to paint it would cost about $4,000.”

The board couldn’t send out a letter to notify family members about the fence removal as they have no record of who or where to send letters.

“My concern is people won’t come to the meeting and they won’t donate any money, but they want everything done,” Pugh said.

Board records indicate funding for the cemetery and the fence have been a constant problem.

In March 2008, the board recorded in the minutes that Ethington had $85 remaining in the fence account and Pugh suggested that the money may have to be used for upkeep of the cemetery sign. John Yount repaired the fence at a cost $180. Berry reported this year a remaining balance of $146.69 in the board’s account. The board cashed in a certificate of deposit this year and also in 2008 to cover costs.

For Ethington, the loss of the fence is just as expensive.

“The historical part of the cemetery is gone and it will never be the same. I don’t think it will ever look the same. You don’t tear down a 100-year-old fence because it’s hard to mow around. It upsets everyone,” Ethington said.

Help Center continues to grow and expand

BY BRAD BOWMAN
news@hclocal.com

The Henry County Help Center in the Eminence United Methodist church continues to grow with donations and volunteers.

On Thursday, Nov. 21, volunteers Rose Bertelkamp and Ruth Rockwell checked lists for food allergies and food preferences as they filled boxes with meat, potatoes, bread and toiletry items for families to pick up. Diabetic concerns and the size of the family play into what volunteers put in boxes.

Dennis Yeary and Rockwell's husband Ed Rockwell were crawling underneath the center's floor putting in another electrical line for additional food storage appliances.

Joe Durbin, who spearheaded the idea, takes forms for family pickups and oversees schedules for their next monthly appointment.

The atmosphere is busy and positive.

Ruth Rockwell and her family have wanted to do something similar to the center for a long time in Pendleton, but the options for a center there just weren't affordable.

"I looked in the paper and saw Joe Durbin's mug and I called him," Rockwell said. "I called him and told him that this is what's been on our heart to do and this is what God told us to do — is feed the hungry."

Rockwell and Bertelkamp conferred that the two would stay focused on helping the needy, and if the center helped even just one person it would be worth it.

"If it wasn't for Joe — because he's done a lot of leg work on this and he tries to keep us all ship-shape — it's work, and it is going to work."

Rockwell and her husband Ed pick up shipments and load them onto their truck trailer. Long hours of standing on her feet doesn't matter to Rockwell.

"We have to focus on why we are doing it. It's not about me, Ed or Joe. It isn't about any volunteer here," Rockwell said. "It couldn't run without everybody. It's not about one person. It's a ministry not a program."

Durbin plans to expand the center's operations by opening mobile centers in the eastern part of the county.

"I'm going to get a mobile site in Drennon and I would like to get one in Lockport," Durbin said. "We have helped 100 families so far and I expect to grow."

The Henry County

Help Center has received monetary and food donations, clothes vouchers and aid that crosses inter-denominational lines.

"Without Dare to Care and the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in La Grange this wouldn't be as big as it is. They are the anchors of this operation," Durbin said. "The assistance has crossed denominational and county lines."

Durbin said the center is down on canned goods like tuna and vegetables... except for canned corn.

"We need dried beans. Anything somebody wants to donate we pretty much use," Durbin said.

Durbin mentioned donors, storeowners, business organizations and church organizations that could fill an entire article that have helped the center so far.

The biggest issue pressing Durbin is reaching everyone in the county. He pulls out a map of Henry County.

"All these marks are people we have helped so far not counting new ones I've signed up," Durbin said. "If you look at Drennon here a mobile pantry could take care of one part of the county and Lockport Baptist Church down here could take care of the other part of this county. We've got to find a solution for that and my solution is to go to them."

Durbin said Drennon Christian Church has started collecting for the center. A donated van would help make the mobile pantries and sites a reality. For Durbin the numbers of impoverished people are still staggering.

"We have 613 households based on the 2010 census data that make less than $10,000 a year. We've got another 349 that make between $10,000 and $15,000 a year. That's 962 families that make less than $14,999 a year," Durbin said. "You have almost 1,000 families that are below $15,000 a year. Then you look at 2,787, which is 18.5 percent of our population that live underneath the poverty line. We haven't even touched it."

When asked how he feels about the help people are receiving through the center Durbin remained humble.

"I just feel grateful that I can do this and life's circumstances have come together for me to be able to do this," Durbin said.

COURT

county ethics committee could meet if they feel (the sheriff) is in violation of the ethics ordinance by hiring his son."

Bates emphasized the ethics ordinance had value based on its moral premise.

"I think this is a good ordinance because it governs us. It doesn't govern anyone else but keeps us from making a mistake of hiring some of our kinfolk if we had a weak moment. I don't really feel like we are governing the people with this — we are governing ourselves."

Magistrate Jerry

Beasley agreed with Bates' position on the ordinance.

"I've talked with Danny and I believe in doing this the way it is once I learned how it was," Beasley said. "I'm saying Fiscal Court has rules for elected officials and I have to go along with them."

Cravens reiterated that the Sheriff's Association deals with issues like nepotism that come up and that several county sheriffs hire family members.

"The sheriff in Shelby County his wife is a full-time deputy. She runs the office during tax collection time and she is a school resource officer," Cravens said. "Trimble County two brothers were sheriff and chief deputy for a long time before they retired. In Carroll County, the sheriff's wife was chief deputy. It goes on all over the state. The only place is where a deputy merit board is in place in larger counties."

Magistrate Nick Hawkins conferred that Cravens had a statute at the previous meeting stating the sheriff could hire and fire who he chooses, but the ordinance would not allow him to hire or fire full-time employees as family members.

Accompanied by Magistrate Mike Fisher, the motion was passed unanimously.

County breaks former records on shoebox donations

2013 was a record-breaking year for Henry County's shoebox donations for Operation Christmas Child. As a county, 3,289 shoeboxes were donated, with Henry Christian Church donating 1,073.

Port Royal United Methodist Church is the county's relay center, and they are "overjoyed by your generosity and participation."

"We want to give a special thanks to Conway Freight for donating one of their trucks, a driver — James Dills, and an extra employee — Suzanne Bloom — to help deliver 1,900 shoeboxes on Thursday. We were able to pick up 80 cartons at Henry Christian and another 53 cartons at Port Royal UMC and take them all down to Louisville in one trip."

2013 is, however, the last year that Port Royal UMC will serve as the relay point, something they have done for 15 years.

The Operation Christmas Child shoebox ministry is a project of Samaritan's Purse, headed by

Franklin Graham. Each year, simple gifts like school supplies, hygiene items and toys are packed in shoeboxes and sent to children worldwide who are suffering from war, poverty, disease and natural disasters.

Since Samaritan's

Purse adopted the program in 1993, more than 100 million shoeboxes have been collected by the United States and 10 other countries, and were shipped to more than 110 countries.

Last week was National Collection

Week for the shoeboxes. In Henry County, 28 churches participated, along with individual families, for a total of 3,289 boxes.

Shelby man loses Supreme appeal in penis case

BY LISA KING
Landmark News Service

Phillip Seaton, a Waddy man who had sued his surgeon for what he said was an unauthorized amputation of his penis, has lost his final appeal.

The Kentucky Supreme Court announced Thursday that it would not consider Seaton's suit against Dr. John Patterson of Frankfort, who in 2007 performed the amputation during a routine circumcision.

In dozens of decisions announced by the court, however, there was no ruling in the suit Shelbyville lawyer Mark Dean had brought against Commonwealth Bank & Trust involving what Dean believes was the bank's negligence in allowing his secretary to embezzle hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In Seaton's case, the court denied his motion for discretionary review, which is its authority to decide if a case merits being heard.

"It's real discouraging, not just for Mr. Seaton, but in my mind for anyone who consents to have a procedure done," Seaton's attorney, Kevin George of Louisville, said in reference to one of his main arguments in the case, that doctors should not have an absolute right to make a medical decision if something unexpected happens during surgery.

"As it stands now, the doctor can do whatever he wants to do," he said. "He can cut off your other leg if he thinks that's a reasonable thing to do."

"They [Supreme

Court justices] get to pick and choose which cases they want to hear," he said. "So that's it — it's the end of the line."

Clay Robinson, attorney for Patterson, said he was not surprised.

"The decision was what I had expected," he said. "I thought the jury had the verdict right and I thought the court of appeals was correct in its reasoning. So there was no surprise on my end when I saw the Supreme Court had declined to accept discretionary review. It's what we had expected. I feel like the justice was served by the original jury verdict."

Seaton, 66, filed suit against Patterson in 2008, a year after Patterson performed a circumcision on Seaton because of an infected foreskin. But when he found cancer, Patterson, who is employed at Commonwealth Urology in Frankfort, amputated instead.

The suit originally had included Jewish Hospital Shelbyville, where the procedure was performed, and Seaton's anesthesiologist, Dr. Oliver James, but those complaints were settled before the trial began. Details have not been disclosed.

In 2012 an appeals court ruled by a 2-1 majority that a Shelby County Circuit Court jury was correct in 2011 when it decided by the original jury verdict.

Dean case waits
A decision in Dean vs. CB&T was expected in September, and Dean said he believes the silence is a good sign for him.

"The longer that thing goes, the better I'm feeling," he said. "They're not wanting to just let that case go. Sometimes no news is good news."

John McGarvey, attorney for CB&T, said, "The lower courts dealt with two issues of first impression in Kentucky, so it does not surprise me that the Supreme Court has not yet rendered a decision."

McGarvey, who responded by E-Mail, did not elaborate on his comment.

Dean filed suit in January 2009, accusing the bank of a violation of a Kentucky Uniform Commercial Code, as well as aiding and abetting fraud and illegal activity and breach of duty of ordinary care.

In 2008, Dean learned that his secretary, Jody Wills, who had been with him since he opened his office in 1998, had diverted more than $800,000 from his clients' escrow accounts, thefts that had been occurring from 2003 to 2005.

The lawsuit was dismissed in 2010 by Shelby County Circuit Judge Charles Hickman in a summary judgment, a decision upheld in 2011 by the Kentucky Court of Appeals, which Dean appealed.

The Supreme Court's next decision day will be on Dec. 19.

Busy time around Simpsonville outlet mall development

BY TODD MARTIN
Landmark News Service

Simpsonville is a hub of excitement and rumors as the construction continues on the Outlet Shoppes of Louisville.

That 374,000-square-foot retail center, being built by Horizon Group Properties and CBL & Associates at the intersection of Buck Creek and Veechdale roads just south of Interstate 64, is moving quickly as the weather starts to turn cold.

Last month Tom Rumptz, the Horizon vice president in charge of the construction, said the plan was to have the buildings enclosed to allow for inside work during the winter.

In an email last week Rumptz confirmed that the project remains on schedule for its July/August opening and added that 90 percent of the retail space is leased.

He said a press release with additional store names would be released soon. The retail center already has commitments from outlet stalwarts such as Banana Republic, Coach, Gap, J. Crew, Nike, Saks Fifth Avenue, among many others.

Rumptz said the company has been in negotiations and discussions with several entities on the three planned outlots for the property, including the two that face Buck Creek Road, but he declined to mention any names, saying it was still too early to speculate what kind of businesses could build on the lots.

And that seems to be the standard line emanating from all those involved in development around the area.

With rumors of a hotel, possibly a Hilton property, and a Dunkin' Donuts opening on the corner northwest corner of Buck Creek Road and I-64 near the Pilot station, and another large destination retail center on the northeast corner either on or near the site of the Shelby County Flea Market, residents are getting very curious.

"We've had a lot of calls and inquiries about sewer and water connections, those types of things, but nothing specific, nobody saying they're with a certain business," said David Eaton, Simpsonville's city administrator. "No specifics, just a lot of rumors, the same ones everybody else is hearing."

Eaton said city hall has had calls on three of the four corners of the interstate, with the flea market area the only one he hasn't had anyone call about.

"I haven't had anything on that area," he said.

Although several sources, who requested anonymity because of the sensitivity of negotiations, confirmed that there were planned changes in or around the Flea Market property, Dana Smith, who manages that property, agreed with Eaton.

"I haven't heard anything about a sale or any changes," said.

Scott Dietrick of Marshal Realty, which owns most of the property surrounding the 25-acre flea market site, said his company wasn't working on any retail developments in the area, either.

Doing due diligence

Triple S Executive Director Ryan Libke, like Eaton, said he has heard from several engineers and companies asking questions about regulations, but no one has submitted plans for developments or buildings with identification.

"People have called with questions about zoning and regulations, but they don't identify who they're with," he said. "They're doing their due diligence, asking about parking, landscaping, setbacks and looking for other explanations."

Libke did comment on a couple of rumors, saying that a hotel purchasing a roughly 10-acre parcel, which is what's platted to the west of the Pilot station, would be abnormal.

"For them [a hotel] to build on a ten-acre site, that would be unusual," he said. "If you look at the Holiday Inn Express, it's on about two acres, and the Ramada Inn, it's on about one-point seven-eight acres. Now, that doesn't mean they couldn't do something else with the land or have it split."

He added that nothing has happened with deeds near the Pilot station or by the flea market, but the construction work being done behind Pilot has been the city's contractors' boring under the interstate to extend its sewer main.

After hitting a large, dense deposit of limestone, city officials confirmed that portion of the work was completed earlier this month and the project is nearly finished.

Libke also noted that the two outlots facing Buck Creek Road on the outlet mall site are a small compared to a typical fast food or other type of restaurant lot, opening even more speculation about what could occupy those two sites, which are less than 1-acre.

However, there is an 80-acre site across from the Outlet Shoppes at Louisville that remains zoned for commercial development.

Trio site

That parcel is owned by Trio Development, and although that company and its partner Paragon Outlet has backed away from a second outlet mall, manager Stuart Flowers said there remain plans to develop the site.

"There has been a lot of buzz, a lot of excitement for our property as the outlet mall continues," Flowers said. "We've been talking to a number of groups that are interested in our site, but nothing is concrete yet. But many of them want to wait and see what the outlet mall will become."

And as the construction continues on the west side of the Buck Creek Road, Flowers said he expects more movement on his property to follow.

"At some point soon, the mall will be what it is, and that's when I think you'll see businesses start to move in these other areas," he said. "I personally have talked to several fast-food and sit-down restaurants, and they are very, very interested. I've talked to hotels, retail, restaurants, everything."

"Some are interested in large lots, and others want to wait and see. There have been a large volume of interested inquiries, it's very exciting."

Flowers added that his group is no hurry now that they're not competing for an outlet mall.

"I never thought we'd be second, but I give the other group a lot of credit for getting their work done," he said. "But we're not going to rush into anything. This is going to be an eighty-acre development. We're not just going to stick a three-thousand-square-foot, fast-food restaurant on here."

"We will have a number of things from sit-down restaurants to banks to retail outlets. This going to be a big development, and we need a number of commitments."

Power substation
One other presence that is under construction is the power substation being built by East Kentucky Power Cooperative that was necessary to bring high-voltage line from a substation near Taylorsville Road and deliver it for use in and around the outlet mall project.

That substation is being constructed in the area along I-64 on the south side, where a rest area for many years was located. Sources said that EKPC had wanted to be nearer to the property where the flea market sits but that landowners didn't want to sell. The state owned the land where the substation is being built.

LEADERSHIP CLASS

Melissa Blankenship/Local

Members of the most recent Henry County Leadership class were honored during a graduation ceremony Thursday night. Each class must choose a project to complete, and this year's class has divided in half to undertake two projects. One is still in the development stage and the second originates from the members of the group with an interest in agriculture. Those members have decided to create a young farmers organization for the county called Henry County Ag Connection. For more information, call Steve Moore at (502) 845-2811. Pictured front row, from left to right are: Michael Douglas, Curtis Coombs, Roby Foree, David Combs and LeAnne Yancey. # New shift in cholesterol treatment

Cardiovascular disease will claim the lives of more than 600,000 Americans this year.

It has long been known that high cholesterol levels are related to higher rates of vascular disease, heart attacks and strokes. For years physicians and patients have taken a reactive approach to high cholesterol and focused on “treating the numbers” to goal. Statin medications such as simvastatin (Zocor), atorvastatin (Lipitor), pravastatin (Pravachol) and rosuvastatin (Crestor) are the most potent and popular medications prescribed to treat high cholesterol.

New cholesterol treatment guidelines recently released by the American Heart Association and American College of Cardiology have flooded

Katherine Jett
Baptist Medical Associates

the news. The new guidelines represent a major shift in the approach to treating high cholesterol. They take a more proactive approach and urge physicians to start statin medications to treat patients with a high risk of heart attack and stroke. As a patient you probably want to know what the new guidelines mean for you.

The new guidelines recommend moderate or high intensity statin therapy for four groups of patients with the following conditions:

- Clinical cardiovascular disease (CVD) – This includes anyone with a history of heart attacks, coronary artery disease, arterial bypass surgery, peripheral arterial disease, transient ischemic attacks, or strokes.
- LDL cholesterol level of 190mg/dL or higher (Previous LDL goals were 130mg/dL for most patients, 100mg/dL for high risk patients, and less than 70 mg/dL for those with diabetes)
- Type 1 or Type 2 diabetes and are between 40-75 years of age with an LDL cholesterol greater than 70mg/dL
- Estimated 10-year risk of cardiovascular disease of 7.5 percent or higher and are between ages 40-75 with and LDL cholesterol level greater than 70mg/dL

The first three groups in this list are easy to identify, but determining risk for future cardiovascular events is trickier. Risk calculator tools must account for age, ethnicity, gender, family history, blood pressure, cholesterol levels, and smoking history. The new guidelines use the Pooled Cohort Equations tool to calculate risk. This tool can be found on the American Heart Association website www.heart.org. If it is not clear if you need statin therapy, your physician may order further testing.

The new guidelines also focus on lifestyle management and strongly recommend a heart healthy diet as the first step to lower the risk of cardiovascular disease. This includes a low fat diet rich in fruits, vegetables, lean meats, and whole grains. Forty minutes of exercise at least three to four times a week is suggested. The guidelines suggest that tailored treatment plans should be developed for overweight and obese patients. If you are a smoker, quitting can dramatically reduce your risk for cardiovascular events.

The bottom line is that you should educate yourself about your risk for heart attack and stroke. Some factors, such as family history and age, you can’t change. However, factors such as tobacco use and diet can be altered. Discuss your risk factors with your physician so that you can work as a team to develop a plan to decrease your risks. One-in-four Americans will die from cardiovascular disease. Take a stand and don’t become another statistic.

Fooducate yourself with a new way to purchase food

Jennifer Grove, the owner of Bluegrass Drug Center in Campbellsburg, and I recently gave a presentation for Henry County’s chapter of the KIPDA Rural Diabetes Coalition (KRDC) at their annual Education Day. Gathering at the middle school in New Castle with fellow educators, patients, families and friends was an inspiring experience and we were excited to be able to present on new technologies available for the management of diabetes.

Lindsey Seel

While I’d love to cover all the material we presented there, including a new medical device that mimics an artificial pancreas with staggering accuracy, I wanted to focus on one product that I believe almost everyone, specifically patients with diabetes, heart disease or diseases that restrict their diets, could benefit from. It is called Fooducate®: Eat a Bit Better™ and it’s an APP, or application, available on iPhone and Android.

What does the app do? It allows you to scan the bar codes of the foods you buy, right in the grocery store or in your own pantry, and then gives you a bullet point summary of the good and bad of that food. Yes, it’s like having a dietician in your pocket. Not a fan of reading? Well then you’re in luck. Each food item is given a grade (D through A) so you can quickly and accurately make a decision.

What I learned? I compared a bag of brand name potato chips with multigrain baked crackers I had in my pantry and guess what.... The potato chips won. They got a “C” grade and my multigrain crackers got a “D” because apparently it’s filled with a petroleum based preservative that can be harmful to the body. I was shocked and an instant convert.

The app is available in the iPhone App Store and the Android “Google Play/Android Market” — just search “fooducate.” My suggestion is to try the free version of the application and see if it fits your lifestyle. If you enjoy the app consider upgrading for $4.99 so that you can personalize your goals and have access to more detailed information.

Want to learn about the other apps available, the new techy version of the medical ID bracelet or how we use foam to design custom shoes for diabetics? Come on by the pharmacy and we’ll chat! Also, for more information on the KIPDA Rural Diabetes Coalition (KRDC) please visit their website at <http://www.krdc coalition.com/>. Take care, and happy eating!

HCHS JOB SHADOWING

SUBMITTED

Cheryl Taylor's LIFE 101 class conducted a job shadowing experience for the seniors at HCHS on Wednesday, Nov. 20, 2013. Each senior was responsible for shadowing an individual that was in the career that they are interested in pursuing once they graduate. Thanks to the help of Officer Mike Lucas, Dakota Sizemore of New Castle was able to shadow

Kentucky State Police Communications Supervisor Kevin Woosley at Post 5 in Campbellsburg. Dakota dreams of being a dispatcher and Woosley was kind enough to do a mock interview with prepared questions supplied by Taylor's assignment. One of the questions on the interview was, "Why do you want this job?"

Dakota's response was, "I was born with a handicap and deal with problems and issues everyday. I have learned how to adapt to my handicap and know that I could use my knowledge to help those in need."

Students in LIFE 101 learn skills like balancing a checkbook, preparing a resume, presenting themselves in a job interview, preparing for college and other tools to make the transition from high school to the real world a little easier.

Reasons for much seasonal thanks

We have much to be thankful for at this time of year, when traditionally we pause after the yearly harvest. Especially pleasing is the custom we have established in this county for family gatherings. So many people are connected to Henry County and its' agricultural past and present, and will be returning to visit family and friends. Our wishes from the Henry County Extension Staff are for your Thanksgiving holiday to be peaceful and pleasant. Even as we enjoy family, we'll see much evidence of a bountiful harvest from our farmlands. A decent size and good quality tobacco crop will be seen on the roads, making its way to the market where the best prices in several years are being offered. Grain harvest will still be underway, as likely the biggest total yield for corn and soybeans is moving toward on-farm bins and the river terminal. Our livestock enjoy some of the best late pastures we've seen in years, and we know that ample hay supplies are available for the coming winter. I am personally thankful to work and live in Henry County with a job that touches and is touched by the rich agricultural heritage and the people who work the land. Several years ago, the agricultural leadership of Henry County impressed me and that feeling has only been strengthened through the years. We are truly blessed to have leaders in every aspect of life in Henry County who understand the importance of agriculture to the fabric of life here. And we are excited about young people beginning careers in farming and related jobs, and already taking important leadership roles. Again, may your harvest of agriculture, family, and friends be bountiful this season.

Make your holidays green by reducing your environmental impact

Often we associate environmental topics with springtime, but you can be environmentally friendly any time of the year. Between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day, Americans produce an extra 1 million tons of trash per week. The holidays are a great time to reduce your waste and get young people interested in the environment. Here are some ways you and your children can reduce your impact on the environment while still enjoying the season and showing loved ones that you care.

- When giving gifts, encourage your children to offer their time. Many older adults enjoy spending time with younger children more than receiving gifts from them.

- Have your child consider doing chores or errands, such as babysitting, instead of giving a tangible gift.
- Encourage your children to get creative and make gifts like scrapbooks or cookbooks with favorite family recipes to give to others as gifts.
- Bake items with your child to give away as gifts.

- Bring your reusable shopping bags when you go to the store.
- Ask your child to package items in reusable materials such as dish towels, beach towels, backpacks or reusable bags.
- Have your child collect pine cones, branches and other natural items from your backyard as these can become holiday decorations that are attractive and fun to make, and they can be composted once the holiday celebrations are over. For more information on greening up your holidays, contact the Henry County Cooperative Extension Service.

Cooking with a pressure cooker saves time and retains nutrients

At the end of a busy day, many of us would love to quickly produce a tasty, nutritious, home-cooked meal with minimal effort. One way you can achieve this is by utilizing an electric pressure cooker. Some of you may be hesitant about using a pressure cooker, either because you're not familiar with them or have heard horror stories from your mother or grandmother about pressure cookers exploding and the cooker and its contents flying across the room. As long as you correctly follow the manufacturer's

UK COOPERATIVE EXTENSION SERVICE
University of Kentucky – College of Agriculture
Extension Notes
Family and Consumer Sciences
Maryellen Garrison
Henry County Extension Office

operating instructions for the cooker, you can cook most foods very safely. Today's pressure cookers include more safety release valves and interlocking lids, which makes them safer than older models. Electric pressure cookers have their own heat sources that are automatically regulated to maintain the desired pressure. In an electric pressure cooker, foods cook three to 10 times faster compared to conventional cooking methods because the cooker does not allow air and liquids to escape the container below a preset pressure. As the pressure builds, the temperature inside the cooker rises above the normal boiling point. This not only helps the food cook quickly, but it helps food retain nutrients and requires less water to prepare items. It also results in less energy used to prepare foods. You can cook multiple foods at the same time, which saves in dirty dishes and time. In addition to following the manufacturer's directions, never fill a pressure cooker more than two-thirds full or more than halfway full for soups or stews. Realize that the hotter a food or liquid is going into the cooker, the quicker it will cook. Brown meat or poultry before putting them into the pressure cooker for best results. Generally, foods that expand as a result of foaming and frothing, such as applesauce, cranberries, rhubarb, cereals, pastas, split peas and dried soup mixes, should not be cooked in a pressure cooker. Cleaning methods will vary depending upon the type of pressure cooker you have. Follow manufacturer's guidelines for cleaning. Store pressure cookers in a cool, dry place with the lid inverted on the body. Failing to do so can result in unpleasant odors and cause wear and tear on the lid's seal. Remember you should not try to use a pressure cooker as a pressure canner to preserve food. The quick come-up and cool-down times may not be long enough to kill all harmful microorganisms, which can cause food-borne illnesses from eating the canned foods.

That's how many Kentuckians, on average, read each copy of a newspaper.

You see, one reads it, then passes it on.

Then another reads it and passes it on.

And so forth.

MYTH

D-I players who received full rides. I know there are two or three more that I have not mentioned, but the point is we have had a handful of D-I athletes receive full athletic scholarships in the entire history of our two schools.

One of the best local athletes I can remember was Eminence High School's Vance Blade and he played at Berea College, an NAIA school.

But let's look at Blade for a moment. He is an example of what a kid from Henry County can do if he sets realistic goals and takes care of business in the classroom. Blade parlayed his basketball ability and good academic record into a great education and has become successful in the business world with Kroger since graduating from Berea.

There are far more of those kind of local success stories than of players going to D-I schools and becoming stars.

Former Wildcat Erick Butler just wrapped up his second season playing for the Thomas More Saints. The Saints are an NCAA Division III school, which means they do not give athletic scholarships. The money their players get is from academic scholarships and loans.

Butler is easily one of the best athletes to come out of Henry County in a long time. He probably has D-I skills and speed but he did not get any big time offers and enrolled at Pikeville where he broke his leg in the first game of his career.

Erick left Pikeville and eventually decided to try his luck with the Saints where he made the all-conference first-team this year.

Erick is a fine young man with his priorities in order. While he loves playing football, the most important thing to him is that he is getting an outstanding education that he probably couldn't have gotten otherwise.

And that is really what it is all about. When the cheering is over and your knees have gone bad, what can you do to provide for yourself and your family?

Most people don't get paid much to tell stories of their high school and college glory days.

Local athletes thriving on the college scene

Butler stars for Thomas More; Paynter starts for The Cumberland

BY GREG WOODS
sports@hclocal.com

As the fall sports season winds down it is time to catch up with local athletes who are competing at the collegiate level.

Thomas More football foursome

Eric Butler, Cody Hinkle, Luke Magness and Nick Magness are playing football for a Saints team that is having a stellar season.

Thomas More finished the season with a 9-1 record and were 22nd in NCAA Division III as of Nov. 16.

Butler, a junior defensive end, was third on the team in tackles with 51 including five sacks for 39 yards and 15 tackles for loss for 74 yards. The sacks and tackles for loss were tops on the team. He also had one forced fumble and five pass breakups.

Butler was named the President's Athletic Conference defensive player of the week twice. The first came in a 20-0 win over Capital University on Sept. 9, when he had 10 tackles and 3.5 for loss. The second came in a 31-0 win over St. Vincent College on Nov. 4, when he had seven tackles and two sacks.

Butler's season was capped by winning first team all-PAC honors last week.

Luke Magness, a junior, played as the backup quarterback for the Saints this season and completed 21 of 35 passes for 200 yards with no touchdowns or interceptions.

Hinkle, a sophomore tight end, had five receptions for 40 yards and one touchdown.

Nick Magness, a freshman linebacker, saw limited action and had one tackle on the season.

Victoria Paynter, a sophomore forward, scored three goals for the University of the Cumberland this season.

Victoria Paynter scores three goals for the University of the Cumberland

The young Patriots team struggled this year with a 2-15 record, but with a lineup loaded with freshmen and sophomores the team's prospects look bright for the future.

Paynter played in all 17 games and started 12. She tied for the team lead in goals with three on the season, including the game-winner against the University of Rio Grande on Oct. 26.

Paynter was one of seven Patriots named to the Mid-South Conference All-Academic team. In order to be nominated to the team, a student-athlete must maintain at least a 3.25 grade-point average on a scale of 4.0.

Phillips competes in third season for the University of the Cumberland cross country team

Eric Phillips, a junior on the Patriots cross country team recently completed his third season as a varsity runner.

Phillips started the season slowly but came on to be the Patriots seventh runner at the end of the season. Phillips equaled his personal record of 27:35 for an 8k race at the NAIA Great Lakes Challenge on Oct. 26 in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Sophomores Jacob Yount, Connor Toole and Jordan Campbell have been key parts of a successful season for the University of Kentucky shotgun team.

FROM THE SIDELINES

Busting the scholarship myth

I've thought long and hard about doing this column on misconceptions regarding the availability of college athletic scholarships.

On the one hand, I don't want to discourage local athletes from reaching for their dreams. On the other hand, I know there are many athletes and parents out there who think that athletic scholarships are easier to obtain than academic scholarships.

I know others who mainly want to see their kids get athletic scholarships for the prestige it will bring them amongst their sports-crazy friends and peers.

A combination of good grades and outstanding athletic performance can help student-athletes reach their goal of getting a college education and continuing their athletic careers, but very few will ever get a full athletic scholarship based on their on-field performance alone.

Let's start with the myth-busting portion and then go on to the encouraging news.

Myth No. 1: When Johnny's

Greg Woods
Sports Editor

picture is in the paper for signing a letter-of-intent he is getting a full athletic scholarship to college.

When we run pictures and stories of local athletes signing a letter-of-intent to play for a college below the Division I level the odds are that student-athlete is not getting very much, if any, money for playing their sport.

What is likely happening is the coach that is signing the athlete has taken into account the athletic and academic performance of the athlete as well as the financial needs of the athlete and come to the conclusion that the player can get academic grants and loans to get into school.

Most college athletic programs below the Division I level do not offer full athletic scholarships. Even in minor sports at the D-I level very few full rides are granted. Only football and basketball at the highest level of college athletics give all their scholarship players full rides.

According to Henry County basketball coach Enoch

Welch, who did some informal research on the subject after we had talked about it, there were only six boy's basketball players in the entire state who received full scholarships to D-I schools this year.

David Levitch of North Oldham, who was one of the best players in the 8th Region last year, is at U of L as a preferred walk on which means he is paying for the chance to play with the Cards.

Levitch is a good example of an athlete who wants to get an education but hasn't gotten the sport out of his system.

Two coaching friends of mine talked about this when we discussed the subject. Most of the players who play at the next level do so because they want to extend their careers for the love of the game. Some of them get academic grants and loans and some of them actually end up paying more to go to a small school with a high academic reputation just so they can continue to play rather than going to a bigger, but cheaper, school.

I was actually one of these players. To call me an average high school player would be generous, but I was absolutely consumed by the game at 18 years of age.

I went to Transylvania because I was told I could walk-on. I was only able to go because of their work-study program and long-term student loans that I worked for several years to pay off after graduating. I actually paid more for college so that I could be a bench warmer for the Transy JV for a couple of years.

According to ncaa.org, about 2 percent of high school athletes are awarded athletic scholarships to compete in college.

"This small number means high school student-athletes and their parents need to have realistic expectations about receiving an athletic scholarship to play sports in college," the site says. "Academic, not athletic, achievement is the most reliable path to success in life."

So what is the big deal with signing a letter of intent if you are not getting a full scholarship? The big deal is that a college coach has basically said, "We believe in you as a student and an athlete and we will do what we can to help you get the aid you need to come to our college."

If a student's priorities are in the right place and getting a full ride is not the number one item on the agenda for prestige reasons then you have accomplished your goal of getting into school through athletics. The key here is having the grades and the desire to get a college education above everything else.

Myth No. 2: If Johnny focuses on sports and the coaches recognize his talent in high school he can become a Division I athlete.

I don't know how many times I have personally heard parents say this or how many times other coaches have relayed stories of parents' unrealistic expectations to me. Again, I don't want to step on a kid's dreams, but when it is the parents' dream then the kid is going to be pumped full of ideas that just may not be true and in the end the kid has worked for something that may not happen and maybe not focused on academics as much as he or she should.

I can think of a handful of athletes from Henry County who have played Division I sports. Please remember when I say this that I have been around Henry County sports as more than a casual observer for most of my adult life and that I went to school there.

Eminence High School had Mont Sleet at Murray State. The same goes for the Warriors' Chrissy Roberts who signed with UK and ended up transferring to ECU and having a stellar career. Henry County has had punter Chet Ervin at Cincinnati and running back Tim Harris at UK as well as pitcher Steve Olsen at Eastern Kentucky University to name some of the more recent
